

Chief Forecaster's Assessment
A depression is expected to deepen and move towards Iceland during Friday, with the associated frontal zone expected to affect the UK throughout Friday and Saturday.

There is some uncertainty in the inland extent of the strongest winds so this alert will be kept under review and updated as necessary.

The Met Office have issued a Yellow Alert of Wind

Southwesterly gales or severe gales are expected to affect much of Scotland during the second half of Friday. The strongest winds will affect northern and western parts at first then reach the Central Belt and south later in the day.
